June 2nd, 2020 - the social implications of legalising euthanasia are explored in an article on Santa Clara University's ethics site headed 'legalizing euthanasia: medical perspectives on death and dying'. Here, two contrasting positions on the topic are presented: one from Derek Humphry, who puts a case premised on the point of view of a dying individual; and Nigel Biggar, who aims to kill the ethics of suicide and euthanasia. May 15th, 2020 - 1. the traditional position and the pressures for change; the western legal tradition; the Christian ethical hinterland; the exceptional value of human life; the justification of taking human life; suicide; Christian ethics; assisted suicide; and voluntary euthanasia; 2. the cultural pressures for change; 3. the value of human life.

'euthanasia through Kantian ethics: euthanasia, murder or

June 5th, 2020 - euthanasia and Kantian ethics. Immanuel Kant was a philosopher who believed in a particular way of approaching ethics. He followed two laws when deciding what to do in a moral dilemma. Firstly, he believed that one should only follow a maxim that you would be happy to be universalised and used to approach every ethical situation. EUTHANASIA, ISLAM AND CHRISTIANITY: DISSERTATION REVIEWS
